Remedy Notes

Student notes on homoeopathic remedies

Students of homoeopathy, whether training in classical or other methods of the discipline, face an enormous volume of information which the need to assimilate in order to familiarise themselves adequately with the remedies - in excess of 2000 - which are available to the practising homoeopath.

This collection of notes (expanded in the second and third editions) is intended to act as an aide-memoire to a number of remedies which students are likely to encounter in their studies. The format is designed as a typical student lecture "notes" page, and users of this manual are encouraged to embellish the notes with their own observations and records arising out of lectures or private study.

The text is easy-to-read, with frequent changes of style and font to give a visual prompt to the task of retention of the remedy notes. Other memory aids are employed within the text: the use, for example, of famous personality types fitting particular remedies. The remedy pictures are not intended to be exhaustive (a near-impossible task!) but will engage the reader's attention in a manner that should enable him/her to memorise key remedy features with ease. They should not be used as a substitute for proper case-taking and diagnosis and any prospective prescriber of homoeopathic medicine should follow the accepted clinical methods for homoeopathic practice.

Comments on the notes, and additions, are welcome.
