PREFACE

It is my pleasure to put before the readers my small book on 'DENTISTRY & HOMOEOPATHY'. The mechanical part of the Dentistry viz. filling of the tooth, cleaning the same by using certain specialised instruments and the surgical part of the Dental Care does not find a place in this booklet. I have tried to put before the Dentists as well as other medical practitioners the panorama of Homoeopathic Therapeutics.

It has been my experience that on number of occasions the dentists in their treatment of the dental problems are confronted with problems as regards the internal medication. On certain occasions, regular allopathic medication such as Pentid Sulphas, antibiotics and many analgesics fail to bring the desired results and anticipated cure making the case problematic. There are certain inflammatory conditions which either prevent or delay the surgical actions which cannot be taken unless these afflictions are cured first.

It is in these conditions, I have found that Homoeopathy has lot to offer mainly on account of there being no side effects, and the medicines being non-poisonous and sweet. I have observed that there is a general consensus that Homoeopathy and Dentistry have nothing in common. The booklet has been specially brought out for these people to remove this information gap and bring out the facts which are of general interest.

During the course of my medical practice, I have treated number of cases that have been referred to me by the dentists as well as those that have come to me for direct consultation for the Dental Disorders both major and minor. During my practice of two decades, I have treated the cases for dental decay, infections and abscesses etc.

This small effort of mine, I hope, will go a long way in acquainting the science of Homoeopathy to others as I have tried through my various publications on the varied subjects with reference to their relation and treatment by Homoeopathy.

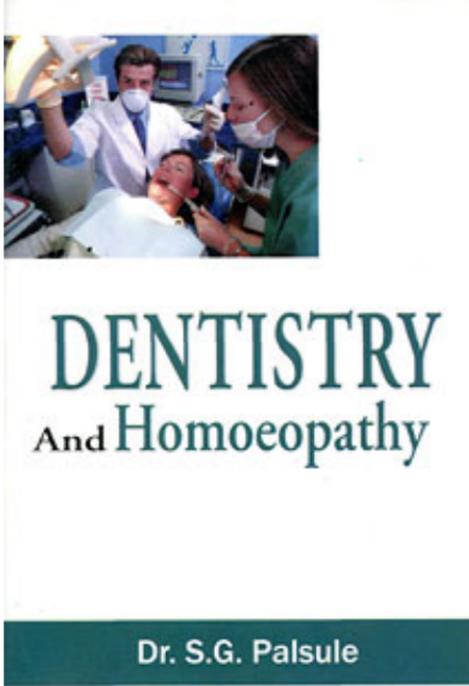

It is a matter of pride for me that I have been instrumental in bringing out this book which incidently is the first of its nature in English. I hope this small book will be a good guide to the general practitioners in dentistry from the homoeopathic view point. I have never maintained that what I write is the ultimate word and as such suggestions and hints from the readers are welcome.

The public has offered me encouragement in my efforts and I am sure, I will be accorded the same this time also. I am ever grateful to Shri V.P. Nerkar of Nerkar Art Studio who has been of considerable help to me in bringing out this small booklet.
