Intro

In introducing the seminar, Jayesh starts by speaking about New York, and that he was there the day before the crash happened. His hotel and seminar venue were right next to the Towers. The whole thing shocked Jayesh very much.

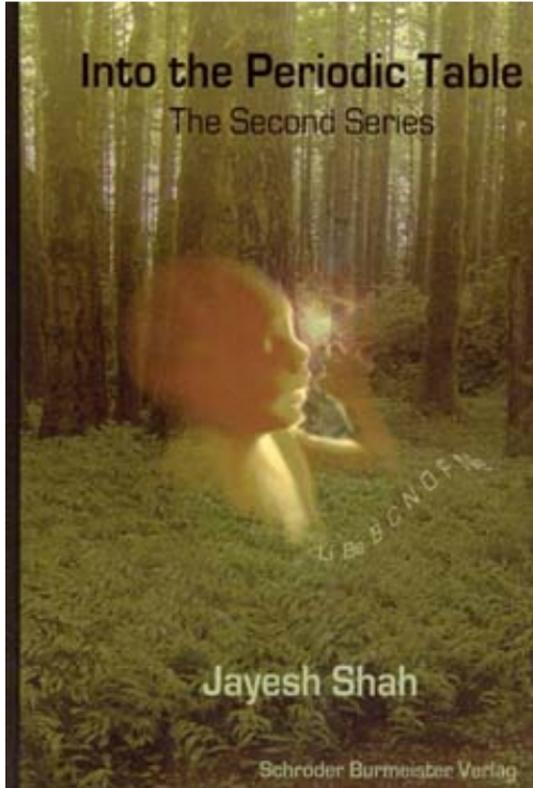

Jayesh Shah:

There was a lot of excitement at the New York seminar. It went so well and we did a lot of cases including some live cases; we learned a lot. I enjoyed teaching there. The group was so enthusiastic, the energy in the classroom was so good, that I left with the feeling: this was the best seminar I ever did. And then came this shock.

I have been looking forward to coming here, because I am going to talk about cases I haven't spoken about anywhere before. So I expect to learn from them too, as if I am also seeing them for the first time. I look forward to sharing with you these new cases that I have learned from in the last years. Some of them have been exciting because I was struggling with them for such a long time. Many cases were patients who came to me again and again for years. One of them came for twenty years, and I could not give him relief all this time. Suddenly new doors opened, new ideas came up and in my mind things started getting clear, and something that was not getting better for twenty years is now improving.

There has been a lot of excitement, as far as the practice of homeopathy goes, in the last year, because of the many new and exciting developments in Bombay that I have been experiencing with my colleagues. Newer ways of looking at things. Deeper ways of looking at things, learning newer techniques of understanding the state. The idea of the plant families. So many new ideas and new ways of reaching what I was trying to reach. Hence suddenly a new door opens, and it's like sitting in kindergarten again, studying. It feels like I am just a beginner now.

So all I can share is that these cases have been just a small beginning. These cases were like beginning to walk a little bit. Suddenly many things are coming together.
