THEORY OF HOMEOPATHY FOR A LAYMAN

Health is a state of balance and disease is the result of weakness of the body's energy or vital force or the 'aatmik Shakti'. Once the vital force gets diminished, the body reflects the same in any of the diseases and one of them is thyroid disorder. The treatment is, therefore, aimed at strengthening the vital force so that the body itself heals the ailment. The symptoms of the disease are the main features for which the medicines are selected. The remedies are based upon the theme that substances produce some symptoms when they are given to a healthy person. When these substances in the form of remedy are given to the sick person, having the same symptoms, which a healthy person produced, the healing takes place. The principle is 'like cures like' (law of similars). The remedies are made from herbs, plants, minerals, animals and other substances. The substances are repeatedly diluted, shaken or succussed by which the power of the substance is increased or one can say that the substances are potentized. Potentization is the process by which invisible power of the substance is increased. This sort of invisible power or energy stimulates the weak vital force because of the fact that it is of the same nature of which the patient suffers. It will nourish the vital force and restore the body to harmony.

SOME CONFUSION IN HOMEOPATHY

Those who come to the rescue of homeopathy have some confusion. Let us clear those confusions first to enable us to proceed further.

CONFUSION-I, IS IT SAFE?

Yes, it is very safe and free from side effects but let me clear that it is not safe if the doctor is inexperienced. Please note that Kent, of whom we have already read, said that he would rather share a room with a nest of vipers than be subjected to the administration of medicine by an inexperienced homeopath.

If someone takes a wrong medicine over a period of time, there is possibility of proving the medicine, which means some reaction. He will suffer from the symptoms, the medicine is supposed to induce and the cure will not ensue.

It is not safe if the patient does the medication by himself, after knowing the name of the medicine prescribed by the doctor. Overuse of a remedy is also not safe.

CONFUSION-II, IS IT SUPPRESSION?

Homeopathic medicines do not cause suppression. Suppression is uncommon in homeopathy but is possible if the doctor does not give oral medicines and directly goes in for local applicants or allows allopathic creams (cortisone for example) in skin diseases. Allowing application of allopathic ointments and giving homeopathic medicines internally may eliminate the skin disease temporarily but the disease will return. Poor choice of remedy also leads to suppression.

CONFUSION-III, IS IT THE PLACEBO EFFECT?

Some people say that homeopathic remedies have the placebo effect. A placebo is a pill without medicine. If you want to check its potential, give it to a person having non-bleeding head injury or in earache/toothache. The pill would not relieve the pains. Only a correcting selected remedy would work in these cases. Homeopaths utilize the placebo when high potency dose is administered to the patient and repetition is not desired. In between the interval of high dose and the time of next induction, placebo is used so that the patient is satisfied that he or she is taking medicine continuously. Noble homeopaths do not use placebo and tell the patients directly to come after a month or so for the next medicinal dose. In today's commercial era, this is not being done.

SUGGESTIONS ABOUT HOMEOPATHIC MEDICINES

If you are not a doctor and want to start medicine for enlargement of prostate, I would suggest you to start taking Sabal Serrulata mother tincture, eight drops in 1/4th cup of water three times a day. Take the medicine half an hour after breakfast, lunch and dinner and do not take
