Introduction

Pregnancy, parturition and puerperium, which are such important moments in the life of a woman and for the newborn baby, are in my opinion, not developed, thoroughly and extensively enough in Kent's Repertory. Therefore, I think it is interesting to make up a compilation on these subjects, as treated by different authors, so as to give them the importance they deserve.

The plan for this work is taken from the Kent Final Repertory, and the numbering of authors from the Synthetic Repertory, by H. BARTHEL and W. KLUNKER.

I must point out that the authors with the indicative numbers 4., 17., 18., 19., 20., 21. and 22. refer to works not included in the Synthetic Repertory. On the other hand, the authors with the indicative numbers 5., 9., 10., 13., 14. and 15. are considered only following the items of the three volumes of the Synthetic Repertory.

Delusions and dreams related to pregnancy and parturition are also included, owing to their close connection with this work. They are certainly not true pregnancies or childbirths, but we often come across them in our everyday practice, as pseudo-pregnancies.

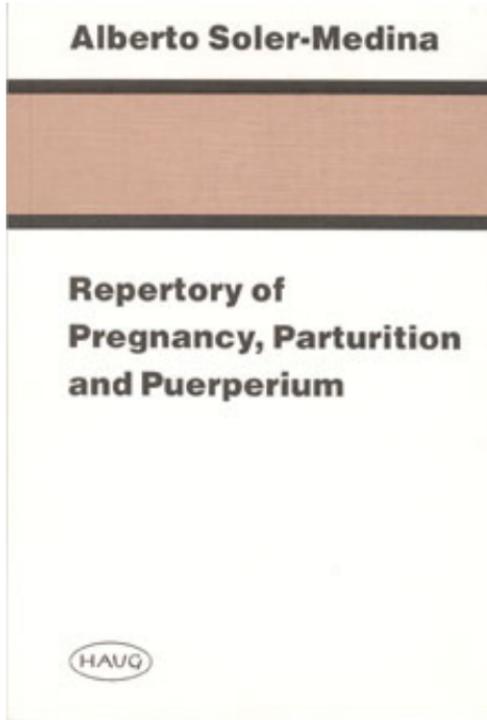

The valuation for the medicaments follows that of KENT in his Repertory:

1. Value one, in mixed setting.
2. Value two, in italics.
3. Value three, in bold letters.

These values do not express the intensity of the symptoms; they are, as G. H. G. J AHR points out, "mere gathering of quality".

I have kept the values given by each author; however, I have to make clear that Drs. S. M. D. JONES (18), P. W. SHEDD (19), E. GRAF (20) and CROSERIO (21) do not indicate any values; therefore, all the medicaments taken from their works are here given value one.
